Search for Girl Ended in South

The search for Miss Thelma Sadler, who ran away from a girls' camp at Emerald lake about two weeks ago, ended Tuesday with the discovery of the girl in Los Angeles. Since the disappearance of the girl from the girls' club, San Mateo county authorities have conducted a protracted search for her or her body, believing that she may have drowned in the lake, or may have wandered into the hills and died from exposure. The girl is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sadler, 139 De Monfort street, San Francisco.

Following the finding of the girl, who was dressed in boy's clothing, in Los Angeles, came the arrest of four men, who are charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The men arrested are William Barrett, 56, his two sons, Paul, 29, and George 23, and Sam Castro, 18.

The girl is said to have wandered to the coast where she met the four men on a fishing trip. When they asked her if she wanted to take a ride to Los Angeles, she is said to have agreed. The girl maintains that she accompanied them of her own volition. However, because of her age, the men will probably have to face a delinquency charge in this county.

Inquest Held In Alpine Accident

An inquest was held yesterday at the parlors of Layng & Tinney into the death of Charles Cuneo, San Francisco auto salesman, who was killed in an automobile accident on the Alpine road near the Skyline boulevard, Sunday. Cuneo was killed, and six others in his car were injured when his car pluged over an 180-foot embankment. The inquest found his death to be due to a fracture of the skull from natural causes.

The accident resulted in the injury of Mrs. Myrtle Cuneo, wife of the dead man, of Francis and James Linland, sons of Mrs. Cuneo by a former marriage; of James Bray, Mrs. Vera Bray and James Bray, their son.

Rural Schools Receive Praise

The rural school conditions in San Mateo county received commendation from the hands of Helen Heffernan, chief of the division of rural education in California in an article published in the July issue of the Western Journal of Education. Miss Heffernan states:

"Down the peninsula," County Superintendent Pansy Jewett Abbott has had Miss Eleanor Freeman for general supervisor and a special supervisor in art, Mr. Howard Trueblood. The report of supervisory activities indicates that San Mateo County is taking advantage of its rich educational environment—Stanford University and the San Jose State Teachers College—to make "bigger and better" rural schools.

Miss Freeman reports concentration on the improvement of reading as her major project during the past year. The San Mateo supervisory bulletin on reading which was sent to rural teachers is an invaluable analysis of the problem.

In addition to the notable reading program, Miss Abbott and Miss Freeman have found time to make a real contribution on the problem of articulation between the elementary and secondary schools. The record sheet provides for recording such data concerning eighth grade graduates as date of birth, character of academic work, special abilities or interests, attitude toward school work, health and attendance. These data will make an excellent basis for educational and vocational guidance in high school.

Interesting bulletins on school standards, daily programs, assignments, and type lessons were distributed as a part of the supervisory program. The quality of the material included shows a "looking ahead attitude on the part of those interested in rural education "down the peninsula."

Clark-Saunders Wedding Sunday

A pretty wedding took place Sunday at the First Methodist church of this city when Miss Marion L. Clark became the bride of Kenneth C. Saunders of this city. Rev. A. H. Clark, formerly pastor of the church here and now of Dunsmuir, father of the bride, officiated.

The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Edna Mae Clark, as maid of honor, while Mrs. Thelma Clark, sister-in-law, and Miss Etta Clark, a cousin of the bride, acted as brides-maids. J. L. Fulmer acted as best man. The ushers were Glen Clark and Albert Clark, brothers of the bride.

Music for the occasion was furnished by Mrs. Carl Fisher at the organ and Mrs. Harry Kingman, who sang, "At Dawn."

Mrs. Saunders is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Clark. During the time that her father was the pastor of the church here she became prominently identified with the younger set of the community and became extremely popular. The bride groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Saunders of Idaho, and is a nephew of Mrs. L. B. Winiger of this city. He is associated with Mr. Winiger in the painting business in this city.

Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Saunders left on a honeymoon trip to Idaho.

So Now He'll Eat His Food In Jail

Being particular is not a part of a tramp's profession. This fact was forceably brought home to Dale Corey, 29, when he was sentenced to 20 days in the county jail by city Judge Edward I. McAuliffe Monday. Corey called at a home on Whipple avenue and asked for something to eat. When the lady of the house offered some food which did not suit him, he showed his displeasure by throwing the food onto the steps at her feet. For the next 20 days Corey's food will be chosen for him by Sheriff McGrath.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Williams and son, Edward, returned Tuesday from their summer home in China, Maine, where they have been visiting for the past two months.

Recommendation In Rail Plea May Not Prove Fatal

The ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission upon the application of the Western Pacific for a permit to construct a road through this county into San Francisco is being awaited with intense interest by residents of ths county, as upon its decision may depend to a great extent the future industrial development of the county. The filing of the report of O. F. Weed, examiner who investigated the application was not entirely favorable, yet it is believed that the hopes for the development may not be wholly abated.

Apparently the chief objection raised in the examiner's report was the fact that the line was to be temporarily terminated at Redwood City.

In his report he said:

"If this project were associated with the present proposal to connect the line at Redwood City with the Western Pacific at Niles, thereby giving the Western Pacific an all-rail entrance into San Francisco, which is suggested as a future development, so that against the heavy expense of such an undertaking could be offset the traffic advantages of such an entrance, questions would be present for consideration which are not raised by the present record."

In another part of his report, Weed says:

"This plan to place the Western Pacific more nearly on an equal footing with the Southern Pacific by giving it an all-rail entrance into San Francisco, in favor of which much might be said, is not now before the commission, and therefore cannot properly be considered as an argument in favor of the application herein."

As it has been the plan of the Western Pacific from the first to connect with the main line at Niles, it is believed that this situation may be settled satisfactorily. The reason, it is stated, that this link was not included in the application was that the Western Pacific desired first to try to make arrangements with the Southern Pacific for use of the Southern Pacific bay brdge at Dumbarton Point. In the event that such arrangements could not be agreed upon the Western is ready to construct a bridge of its own across the bay at Dumbarton Point, if the commission would grant the permission, President H. M. Adams of the Western Pacific states.

Father of Local Merchant Passes

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at Cypress Lawn for Jerome A. Allen, who passed away Wednesday at Assilomar, Monterey county. Services wil be strictly private. Mr. Allen was the father of Stewart H. Allen, proprietor of the Redwood City Dry Goods Company of this city, and had often visited with his son here. He was a native of England, and had been a resident of this country for many years. His wife, Mrs. Bertha Allen, passed away some years ago.

Exchangites Hear Of Social Work

One of the most interesting talks to be given before the Redwood City Exchange Club was enjoyed by members of that organization at its regular Tuesday evening meeting at the Sweet Shop. The speaker of the evening was Lieut.-Col. John Brea of the Salvation Army, chaplain at Folsom, who spoke on social service in a manner which held the members spell-bound from start to finish. Lieut.-Col. Brea defind social service in a unique conclusive way, stating that: "In the home, it is kindness; in the business, it is honesty; in society, it is courtesy; in work, it is fairness; toward the unfortunate, it is pity; toward the weak, it is help; toward the wicked, it is resistance; toward the strong, it is trust; toward the penitent, it is forgiveness; toward the fortunate, it is congratulations; and toward God, it is reverence and love."

The chairman of the meeting was William O'Connor. An interesting feature of the evening were talks by several members who have just returned from vacations. Those speaking were Frank Griffin, Wilbur Doxsee, Francis Tinney and Al Davies.

Bob Murphy, who recently opened a men's furnishing store here was welcomed into the club as a member by Colin Stokes.

Miss Mary Stewart, a prominent educator of Santa Rosa, is visiting friends in Redwood City, where her girlhood was passed and where she began her profession as a teacher. Tonight Mrs. Cecelia Graves plans to give a reception to Miss Stewart at her home on Edgewood road to which she is inviting Miss Stewart's former pupils and friends.

Mrs. John Johnson returned this week from a visit with her mother in Utah.

Attracting Local Industries

EDITORIAL

THERE was once a time when new industries sought the larger cities. Location in large centers was considered essential to industrial success. During the past decade there has been a trend in the opposite direction, many manufacturers moving their plants away from the large centers of population because of the many advantages in the less highly populated communities. This change seems to prove that big business can go where it pleases.

A manufacturer does not move to a new location without first making a very comprehensive survey, and two of the things he considers are —"Does this community offer attractive living conditions for my employees?" and, "Are the citizens loyal to their home industries?"

A diversification of industries is important to a town from the payroll standpoint, just as a diversification of crops is important to the farmer. The failure of one crop from any cause will not break the farmer if he has others to depend on, and if a town is supporting several industries, they will in turn support the town. Diversification stabilizes the earnings of the community.

Towns and cities in every part of the country are striving to attract industry. They have come to the realization of the fact that it is essential to community growth and development. They are "putting their house in order," they are making their communities inviting to industry.

How this can be accomplished, the steps that should be taken, and the advantages to be gained are discussed fully on page three of this issue of the Times-Gazette devoted to our community campaign. Redwood City is in need of a greater industrial development, and we should bear in mind that even the smallest industry is a valuable asset to a town. Our success in this endeavor depends upon our always making Redwood City attractive to industry.

Lions Seeking Country Girls

By C. N. P A. SERVICE

Lion's Clubs n this section are searching for the champion "country girl" whomsoever she may be. They want her to participate in a contest at the Diamond Jubilee State Fair in Sacramento on September 4, which has been designated as Lion's Club day. And they want the championship title to be awarded to a southern California girl.

All over the state Lion's Clubs are searching for this particular girl who can milk a cow, ride a horse and bake a cake a little better than anyone else. The competition is open to girls over sixteen and points will be awarded on a basis of appearance as well as the horse, cow and cake contest. In addition to a first prize of $75, the winner of first place will be awarded a beautiful silver trophy by Ray L. Riley, state controller and also president of the International Association of Lion's Clubs.

Any girl can enter and aspirants for the high honors should consult with the Lions' Club in this city or in a neighboring city. The Lions Club of Sacramento is arranging the details of the contest with Past District Governor Fred J. Johns of Sacramento, well known to all Lions in this state, as one of the prime movers of the contest.

"Realizing that the nation's prosperity will always depend upon the output of its farms, we are encouraging boys to stay on the farm. That means that girls must be on the farms, too, so we want to recognize these practical girls in a manner which will give them something to work for that they will earn by their own prowess and ability," said President Riley in announcing the contest.

So if there is a girl in this district who can do the things required, the Lions Club would like to hear about it.

Bayshore Road May Be Forced

The Bayshore highway will be built to Redwood City even if the railroad commission has to take the matter to court, B. B. Meeks, director of the state department of public works, has announced. "If the present negotiations to have the 'orphan' spur track at San Mateo removed are not successful, the State Highway Commission, through the State Railroad Commission, will seek court action to secure condemnation of the right of way at the point where the spur crosses the proposed construction of the Bayshore highway," Meek stated.

In the event that a condemnation cannot be secured the Highway Commission will demand that a grade separation be constructed and available for use on the day that the road is thrown open to the public.

New Stunt Tried By Check Passer

A new wrinkle in bad check passing was tried in Redwood City this week, and with some success. The check passer in this case went a step further than merely writing out a check on a bank where he had no funds. Such methods might do for the ordinary passer of fictitious paper, but not for this chap.

To assist him in his "profession" the person being sought by Redwood City police carried checks specially printed in an imposing style on safety paper, and purporting to be issued by the Security Home Filnance Company of San Francisco. The checks were made out to T. J. Dennison and signed by J. C. Brook, secretary. When the checks began to return the police were notified, and report that the Security Home Finance Company cannot be located, neither can its secretary.

In working his dodge here, the man known as Dennison, rented an apartment, paying with a bad check. With his residence established, he found it comparitively easy to buy goods for delivery to his apartment and pay with other checks, receiving change in each case.

Many former residents of the Battle-born state are looking forward to the event. The affair has become an annual one, and many journey from the Sagebrush state each year to meet their old friends now residents of Sunny California.

The card states that one will need the whole day to meet all friends, so come early and stay late.

The officers of the association are Philip McGrath, secretary, 1420 Jackson street, Oakland; Chas. W. Pangburn, chairman, 1125 Seventh street, Oakland; and Frank S. Starratt, recording secretary, 384 Fairmont avenue, Oakland.

Following the business of the meeting the boys enjoyed songs and entertainment.

Three Are Held For Examination

The men were being held in the county jail this week for investigation in connection with the murder about two weeks ago of an agent of the department of justice on the Texas-Arizona border. The men held gave the names of Harvey Smith, 18, a laborer; R. T. Cooper, 28, a laborer, and Cecil Miller, 23, salesman. The men were under investigation by officials of the department of justice from San Francisco.

In the course of the investigations of the department and those of Sheriff J. J. McGrath, a number of facts have been ascertained concerning two of the trio.

Cooper, whose real name was found to be Cosper, is an escape from the reform school at Hutchinson, Kansas, and will be returned to that institution. Miller is charged with carrying a gun and will be tried on that charge if more serious offenses are not found against him. He is believed to be an escape from the disciplinary barracks at Leavenworth, Kansas. Miller is also charged with passing a fictitious check for $140 on Wayne Adams of San Francisco. The check was the first payment on the car in which the three were found asleep when arrested.

Smith, who met the other two only a short time before the arrest was made, will be held as a witness against them.

New Directory For Phone Subscribers More Convenient

San Mateo County will soon have its own telephone directory, according to L. C. Brown, manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company here.

Preliminary steps in the preparation of the first San Mateo County Telephone Directory are now under way, and present plans indicate that delivery of the new directory will be undertaken about November first.

"Approximately 12,000 copies of the directory wil be issued," Mr. Brown stated, "and it will contain lists of subscribers, alphabetically arranged, for each exchange in San Mateo county. The new directory will be mucn lighter in weight than the old, and due to the listing arrangement it will be easier to locate the party you wish to call."

A Buyer's Guide section will be included in the directory listing most of the county's business concerns. This section offers the progressive business man an opportunity of keeping his name and products before the more than 10,900 telephone subscribers in the county.

Listings of all telephone subscribers in San Mateo county will also continue to appear in the "Other Cities and Towns" section of the Bay Counties directory.

Century Plant Has First Bloom Here

A century plant belonging to Mrs. J. W. Lowe of Edgewood road this week bloomed and has been the object of considerable comment. The plant on which the blossom appeared was planted more than 25 years ago, and this is its first bloom. While reputed to bloom but once in a century, the plant generally betters that mark by several years; but so rare are the occasions on which its bloom can be seen that many persons never see one in bloom.

The blossoms are as peculiar as the plant and form in great custers at the top on a stem some fifteen feet high. They are full of a sweetish fluid and attract thousands of butterflies, bees and other insects.

San Carlos Bonds Loose At Election

The bond issue submitted to the people of San Carlos last Thursday for the purchase of property for a civic center was defeated at the polls by a vote of 193 against the proposition and 99 for it.

SCENES OF OF COUNTY BE SHOWN

Sequoia Theatre To Run Picture Today

President Herbert Hoover is complimented for having his home on the San Francisco Peninsula, by the new San Mateo County scenic film of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce. A beautiful picture of the President's home at Stanford is shown to emphasze the desireability of having a home among the romantic, historic, climatic and scenic advantages of "California's Picturesque Peninsula."

A very comprehensive two reel film of that name has just been completed, under the direction of Roscoe D. Wyatt, manager of the County Chamber of Commerce. This film wil be shown to the people of Redwood City at the Sequoia Theatre this evening. The film will be run through the courtesy of the manager, Tom Kane, in addition to the regular program of entertainment offered by the local show house. It will be shown between the first and second showings of the main picture.

A few of the sub titles of particular interest to the people of this end of the county are: Wooded Hills and Garden Homes Down the Peninsula, showing Menlo Park scenes; Fast and Frequent Trains Gather Commuters from Sunny Suburbs, showing the Redwood City station; Belmont Hills and San Carlos Gardens; More than 500 Express Cars Burdened wth Beauty, showing the shipping of chrysanthemums from Redwood City; Berry Fields at East Palo Alto, Menlo Park and Atherton.

This film is also to be seen daily, except Wednesdays in Los Angeles from 2 to 4 p. m. in the theater of the California State Building in Exposition Park, Los Angeles, upon request by those interested.

Another print has been sent to the U. S. Embassy at London, England, for use by the Commercial Attache in conection with his lectures in London and surrounding towns. Arrangements have been made with ten middle western Universities to distribute ten prints throughout their states through their Visual Education departments.

Opening with a short prologue reminding us of the western trend of civilization it presents art pictures of Phoenician traders, Goth invaders, Viking raiders and Columbus in the new world. Following are shown the coming of the Pilgrims, Pioneers, Plainsmen and the Padres. "That for which all so long sought has here been found at the End of the White Man's World—California."

Through this film thousands will see the mountain lakes, redwood forest, rugged coast and roaring surf, flowering fields, prize herds of cattle and sheep in pastoral scenes, tense moments lifted from the "Big Game," Tanforan races, high diving, polo and baseball.

Educational advantages are stressed by views of Universities of Stanford and California as well as the San Mateo Junior College and high-schools.

This film will also be shown in the San Mateo County Booth at the State Fair in Sacramento August 31 to September 9, this year.

For the first time in history travel will continue all winter across Sutter Basin without interruption. Although legal delays will not permit paving of the highway projected by the joint Sutter-Yolo district, just formed, Sutter county Supervisors plan to maintain a gravel surfaced highway. The causeway over Sutter by-pass, built by the State, will be ready for use this winter. Next year the paved highway will give the bay district a better route to Northern California.

Construction of new state roads in Mendocino county is opening up a new area of mountain scenery for the motorist. Residents of Fort Bragg contend that the county contains some of the most inspiring scenery in the state, with its wild redwood forests, numerous fishing streams and other mountain attractions. Citizens of the town point out that scenery had much to do with the establishment of the town, for when it was established by Lieutenant Heinselmen in 1856 as an Indian reservation, wild mountain characteristics, among which the Indian would feel at home, entered into its location as headquarters.

By the narrow margin of $139, G. W. Cuching, Richmond paving contractor now engaged in paving Alhambra avenue in Martinez won the contract to pave numerous streets in recently annexed residential districts of Antioch with a bid of $48,445.18. The streets to be paved with concrete lie south of Tenth street and will complete the paving of the city's streets.

Youths of California are "being educated before they grow up" and are turned out of school rooms into a matter of fact world, unable to apply the knowledge they have acquired, Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, declares. "Fact centered" instruction employed in California public schools in the education of children will in time give way to "child centered" methods of instruction, Kersey predicts. There will be a day when report cards recording the fact assimilation grade of the student is passe. Pupils will be educated in life experiences—those they must face when they have left their teacher in the class room, he believes, and the schools will endeavor to develop qualities of manhood and womanhood in children.

The application before the State Railroad Commission is opposed on the gound that the proposed service would be inadequate, and would furnish the Northwestern Pacific Railroad legal right on which again to apply for authority to abandon the present railroad line between the two points.

One hundred and fifty Sacramentans, all trainmen in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company, and their families had a reprieve from a recent order which would have compelled change of residence to Oakland or Sparks, Nevada. Postponement came when T. Ahern, assistant general manager, announced that the recent order of Division Superintendent W. L. Hack rearranging trainmen's schedules would not be placed in effect at the present.

San Joaquin county's fair and horse show, to be held in Stockton soon has the largest list of exhibits in its history entered, according to reports. Livestock and poultry entries are the most numerous. Racing in the afternoons during the fair will be for purses aggregating $20,000. At the fair last year an average speed of 2:09 was made for fifty-three heats, and with the entry of record breaking horses this year racetrack enthusiasts are looking for track records to topple.

California Development Association will campaign to have all air schools in the state rated by the United States Department of Commerce, it was announced by R. E. Fisher, chairman of the association's aeronautical committee. The Federal Government has authorized rating of air schools, but such rating is not compulsory, he said. The association will campaign to secure recognition of the need and benefits of Federal endorsement by means of the Department of Commerce classification.

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce will take action on the proposal to call an election for the annexation of territory between Sacramento and North Sacramento. The annexation of this region is necessary to permit North Sacramento to become a part of Sacramento, the law providing that territory annexed must be contiguous. The chamber is anxious that the election be held before the Government takes the 1930 census.

With passage of a law by the last Legislature holding county governments liable for acts of their employes in damage suits, Butte county is taking steps to obtain public liability and property damage insurance on all automobiles and other valuable vehicles operated on county business. The Board of Supervisors thinks the county should be met at least partial coveage on county automobiles. Frank Boyle, county purchasing agent, is receiving offers from various companies on insurance rates. It is estimated the plan will incease the county insurance costs by $2500. The supervisors' budget contains $8500 for insurance.

Oroville high and elementary schools ask more money for operating expenses in the next fiscal year than was spent in the past year. Last year the high school spent $74,485 while next year $76,800 is asked. The elementary schools want $78,216, while $75,479 was spent last year.

Nearly one-half of the total amount of quicksilver in the United States was produced in California in 1928, some 6711 flasks valued at $123.50 a flask, according to the bureau of mines and mining. The nation produced 16,838 flasks.

Work on the project for the widening and straightening of the Hayward-Niles highway has been started, and will be completed within a month, according to plans of the State Highway Commission. The right-of-way is to be widened to 100 feet, and the pavement will be widened by the addition of a ten-foot shoulder. Another shoulder is provided for when the traffic demands. Elimination of two dangerous curves near Niles, and the widening of the underpass under the Southern Pacific tracks are included in the improvement program.

Walter Johnson Signing Contract to Manage Washington Club While Clark Griffith Looks On.

Walter Johnson will manage the Washington club next year and the year after, according to an emphatic announcement by Clark Griffith, president of the club.

"I am getting tired of reading rumors about our club," Griffith said. "We are in the experimental stages. Johnson will go through with his three-year contract. He will have complete charge of salaries and all other details incident to the personnel of the club."

Griff's announcement came in the wake of rumors that Walter Johnson would be relieved of the management of the club.

"Not only will Walter fulfill his three-year contract as manager, but he will be given more power than he is shouldering now," Griffith said. "He will take over the task of fixing the salaries of his veteran players for next year. This is quite an unusual distinction for a manager, I believe, but I want everyone to realize that Walter is boss.

"He is to rule with the iron hand. He has full jurisdiction and there will be no outside interference. The public sooner or later will wake up and realize that he is a real leader and not a figurehead. One who has never been manager finds it takes time to become accustomed to the position, but once he gets the hang of it, I look for him to do things in a big way.

"I have the utmost confidence in him and I'm going to see that he gets every chance to make good. He has never failed me yet and, if I know anything, he won't now."

Runs to Fours

Art Shires, the colorful first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, runs to fours. In four different years he played on four different colleges under a different name each time. In his first major league game he made four hits, one a three-bagger off Ruffing of the Boston Red Sox. Contrary to beliefs, Shires is a modest youth off the diamond. Quiet, unassuming and hard to interview. His disposition on the ball field is something else. Half of the present season he has played with a badly injured ankle heavily bandaged.

Veteran Hurler Forced to Quit Diamond Work

Russell "Jing" Johnson, pitcher of the Allentown club of the Eastern league and last season with the Philadelphia Athletics and Baltimore Orioles, has been ordered to quit baseball by his physician because of a leaking heart. He went on the voluntary retired list.

He said he was first troubled after pitching a game in Providence on a warm day three weeks ago and that he pitched four games in the next 11 days. Since that time, he has had a pain over his heart.

Baseball at Night Is Planned by Louisville

Nocturnal baseball may be played in 1930, according to William Deaf, business manager of the Louisville Baseball company of the American association. He said the Colonels are likely to entertain visiting teams at night games instead of the usual daylight contests.

Officials of the club have been in conference with engineers of the General Electric company, at which plans for games after sundown have been discussed.

Ohio Takes Up Polo

Polo has been made a varsity sport at Ohio State university, according to a recent decision of the athletic board, which voted to award the "O" to members of this year's team.

The schedule for next year has not been drawn up, but matches with Chicago, Illinois, Michigan State and Princeton are under negotiation. Polo has been gaining rapidly as an intercollegiate sport since the war not only at Ohio but other colleges have taken up the sport.

ROSY PICKS HIS "MONEY" HURLER

Milwaukee Brewer Pitcher Recalls Phil Douglas.

Who was the best "money" pitcher in the last quarter century? Was it Eddie Plank? Grover Cleveland Alexander, or Herb Pennock?

If you will permit Rosy Bill Ryan, of the Milwaukee Brewers, to decide, it is neither of this trio. Rosy's choice is the almost forgotten Shufflin' Phil Douglas, ten years ago John McGraw's ace-in-the-hole.

Shufflin' Phil, you may remember, was the bootleggers' best friend while on the pitching staff of the Giants, and his devotion to the cup that cheers prevented him from hanging up a record that would have put him in baseball's blue book right near the front.

"I have seen a lot of ball games and a lot of pitchers during my stay in the big leagues but when it came to a tough spot my choice would always be the Shuffler. And Douglas liked to get into a tight battle in the eighth or ninth.

"He had nerve as cold as an iceberg. He might have been dozing in the sun somewhere and when they sent him in to relieve he would probably ask what inning it was and how many he had to get out. The first two pitches would go whistling at the batter's chin and then Phil would 'come down the middle' with three straight strikes. When he threw at you he wasn't fooling, either.

"I was with the Giants the last few years Douglas was in baseball and his intemperance became so bad that he would 'hock' almost anything he had to get even the worst kind of drinking poison. His pay checks all went to his wife and McGraw finally issued an order that any player that loaned Phil even a dollar would be fined 200 bucks. But out in the center of that diamond, with the game at stake, Shufflin' Phil was the greatest the game has known."

Gonzales Is Best

For baseball's most useful utility man, Manager Joe McCarthy casts his vote for the veteran Mike Gonzales, sturdy Cuban catcher. When Hartnett injured his wing on the training trip, McCarthy called upon Mike and he delivered. Last summer Mike was the spark plug in the Cubs' almost successful drive for the pennant.

FARM POULTRY

FLOCK HISTORY IS GUIDE IN CULLING

Always Better to Improve Production by Care.

"In culling poultry the history of the flock should be the first important consideration," say the extension specialists in poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university. "If the flock as a whole has been laying heavily throughout the entire year, culling should be comparatively easy, as the good birds will show evidence of high production, while the few poor birds will be outstanding, showing very definite evidences of low production or none.

"If the flock has laid indifferently throughout the year, or has suffered from parasites such as red mites, lice, or intestinal worms, or is improperly housed or cared for, the culling will be very difficult, for many of the birds that are really worth keeping will be questionable, due to their condition. Under such circumstances the first step should be to correct conditions, and allow the good birds to come back and show their value, which will cause the poor birds to be more easily recognized.

"It is always better to improve average production by better management rather than by culling, which decreases the number of birds and cuts down the possible earning power of the flock."

Get Rid of Parasites on Chickens in Flock

The hens have enough to bother with in the summer with the hot weather without having to fight lice and mites in addition. The flock owner can do a great deal to help the hens get rid of these pests.

There are various remedies on the market which can be used, or a drug known as sodium fluoride can be bought at the drug store and can be put on the hens, applying it on the back, head, throat, on the breast, around the vent, between each thigh and the breast and on each wing. This is a rather tedious process, although it will get all the lice.

Within the last year and a half, however, it has been found that painting Black Leaf 40 on the perches will rid a flock of lice. This is easy and effective.

Mites are a worse pest than lice, since these little bugs stay in the cracks and crevices around the nests, droppings boards and perches during the day and get on the birds at night, at which time they suck the hen's blood. These can best be fought by using a strong disinfectant on the nests, roosts and droppings boards.

If these pests—lice and mites—are allowed to remain on the birds, they will sap the chicken's vitality and will hinder egg production considerably.

Ducks and Geese Are Fed Pretty Much Alike

Ducks and geese are fed just about alike. They should be kept warm and dry and fed about four or five times per day. All young water fowl should have soft feeds, that is to say, wet mashes mixed as follows: Three parts yellow corn meal, four parts bran, one part red dog or low-grade flour by weight. Add to this 10 per cent of high-grade meat scraps, 1 per cent of fine sand, and mix with water or milk so that it is quite moist but not sloppy. Feed this every two or three hours for two weeks.

Care for Chicks

Raising good chicks is about the most important thing on a poultry farm. That to a large extent determines your profits. If you neglect the chicks by crowding them too closely, by letting the house become filthy and the soil in bad shape, you may produce weak chicks that do not live well and lay well. It is comparatively easy to grow good chicks if you are willing to do the necessary work of properly caring for the chicks.

Turkeys on Upgrade

Turkey raising is on the upgrade, now that the blackhead bugaboo has been done away with. And the turkey growers are getting the marketing system down to a fine point, too. Six turkey marketing associations have just been formed in various parts of Colorado, and the next thing will be a statewide pool. Profits received by members of turkey marketing pools in the West last year were very pleasing—that's why new pools are being formed to handle this year's crop.

Scratching Shed

In some of the warmer sections of the country, fowls will prefer to spend their nights in the trees and on outdoor roosts but severe storms, driving snows or heavy rains will in most instances, send them into the houses. It is the storm more than the cold that the hen objects to, and for this reason, if no other, a scratching shed where the fowls are sheltered from the wind, should be provided where the layers can sing and keep busy during the entire day.

Hens Need Water

Unless hens are given all the milk they can drink, water should be supplied to the flock so that it is easily accessible at all times. Even then water may be found advisable. It is well to remember that there is about a pint of water in a dozen eggs and hens will not lay "dried" eggs. It is especially important that laying hens have water to drink as soon as they come off the roost in the morning and again just before going to roost at night.

"UNDER THE SPREADING CHESTNUT TREE—"

"Under the spreading chestnut tree, the village smithy stands—"

And not so many years ago, the "Village Smithy" stood as the chief, and almost sole, local industry. The activities of this romantic figure have been expanded, until today we have a complex, many-sided industrial world—specialized and diversified; offering greater employment, housed in modern quarters and operating modern machinery.

But the picture of the "Village Smithy" still remains the symbol of local industry.

Industry is essential to our community growth and development. It furnishes employment, it brings additional money, it adds greatly to taxable property, it attracts additional attention to us as a community. Industry is a powerful, constructive influence.

Our town needs the right kind of Industry and Industry needs us as the right kind of town.

It should be the desire of everyone to promote the growth of industry in this community. Not only should we strive to secure both large and small industries for our town, but we should make our present industries feel we welcome them. The smallest industry is of importance for, like the larger industrial unit, it too, employs labor, diversifies our industrial activity and possesses the possibility of growth.

But to attract and hold industry we must be deserving!

Sixty per cent of all industry can go where it pleases! It selects the community in which it desires to locate. The present era is showing a great migration of industry, with the trend toward the smaller industrial centers.

What, then, should we do to attract and hold more industries?

To attract industry we must possess its fundamental requirements. First, as a community, we must prove attractive to Industry by being a good place in which to live—by improving our rating as to general living conditions.

Industry seeks the towns where present living conditions result in better production. The possibility of home ownership is important because it makes for permanent employees. Modern school facilities for the children and wholesome recreation and amusement, largely publicly provided, are attractive to industry. And also of utmost importance is the care exercised in Public Health—a guarantee of health to all right-living employees.

Improved transportation and wide-spread electric power have fitted many places for industrial growth. Fortunate is the town that can offer industry lower production costs, improved shipping facilities, nearness to markets and raw materials, low land costs and reduced taxes.

This Community must share in the industrial expansion. Let us "put our house in order" so that we may create a greater industrial development. Let us strive to enjoy the fruits of increased employment, increased population and increased prosperity.

Commercial organizations alone should not be asked to do all of the work of attracting industry to our city. Each person should do his share to make our town attractive to industry—should broadcast the many points of advantage of

Future of Education Outlined by Cooper

CHARACTERIZING the present age as one marked by rapid change and great speed with a trend toward speed frenzy, taking every advantage of power-driven machinery in production, standarizing its products to a degree never before known and measuring its results in dollars and cents, William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, outlined the effects such trends must have on the schools of the future, at the opening session of the convention of the National Education Association in Atlanta, Ga.

He advocated as the methods of approach, four procedures: first, to study the satisfactory features of present day schools from kindergartens through colleges, to extend and improve, if possible, the best we now do; second, to discover the weak spots in our present system and remedy them; third, to study objectively the experiments now in progress. He called attention to the nation-wide study of secondary schools about to be undertaken by the United States Bureau of Education. Doctor Cooper's fourth proposal was that such studies as represented in "Hiddletown" by Lynds be extended with a view to ascertaining the deficiencies in American life and attempting to remedy some of them by programs of education.

TheCommissioner predicted that the future development of education would extend along the lines of the extension of scientific methods of objective study and tested thought to all fields of life, a displacement of the dogmatic, a recognition of leaders in their particular fields, a stronger emphasis on real social science designed to enable people to co-operate better for the common good, a system of values in all realms of life, and a plea for individuality.

The Proposed Railroad

THE proposed line of the Western Pacific through this county to San Francisco is meeting with difficulties. Whether or not the Interstate Commerce Commission will accept the recommendation of its examiner is now the vital question in this proposed rail development, and to San Mateo county, if not to northern California. It is unbelieveable that any body of men appointed to serve the interests of the people can ignore so grossly the interests of a growing and important section so intimately connected with the growth of San Francisco, the metropolis of the west.

With no reflection upon the railroad at present serving this district, it can be said that the mere fact that a single rail line must be depended upon for transportation here, stifles industrial growth. The application of the Western Pacific for a line to tap the potential industrial sections of this county ,offered, the people of this district hoped, the solution of this handicap.

After building lines across the continent to reach the west, then to be shut off from the chief port on the Pacific coast when a few miles away, seems like unfair treatment to the Western Pacific. But to the people of the peninsula, it is of more than a general interest; more than sympathy for a concern that appears to be receiving the bad end of a raw deal. To us it means a retardation in progress, a smothering of development, and a set back of years in the growth of this territory.

San Francisco is the only city of its size we can call to mind which is served by a single railroad. Aside from the freight which is transported across the bay, one line holds a monopoly upon the transportation of the west's trading center. Perhaps the Interstate Commerce Commission will rule that this condition is as it should be. We hope not.

Physical vs Mental

AN announcement from the White House forecasts an expenditure, for the Army, Navy, public works and postal deficit of approximately $1,100,8000,000 for this year, an increase of $91,800,000 over last year. For next year it was estimated that those expenditures would reach $1,129,200,000, an increase of $28,400,000. For 1932 the estimate placed the figures at $1,145,800,000, an increase of $16,600,000, and in 1933 at $1,-148,800,000, an increase of $3,000,000 bringing the total estimated increase to $139,800,000 and the total expenditure for the period, to $4,524,600,000.

Thus billions will be spent by the government on guns, cruisers, and the maintenance of the Army and Navy; farm relief to protect the food supply, and on roads, harbors, and waterways to secure rapid communication.

Measures providing for the establishment of a Department of Education ask for the comparatively small annual appropriation of $1,500,000. If those huge sums can be expended in increasingly large amounts for the physical welfare of this country's population, is it possible that there could be a protest against this small additional appropriation to aid in their mental development?

Advertise Liberally

VISIT any live town and you will find that the merchants of the town are good advertisers. Not one or two of them, but every merchant of any consequence in the town is an advertiser.

As a result of the combined advertising, the many good, well written advertisments filled with prices and good argument, there is attracted to the town a regular host of buyers who spend their money for the merchandise the merchants of the community have to sell.

A survey of the town will show that the advertising is not left to one or two merchants to bear the burden of the sales promotion, while a large number of free riders sit back and attempt to reap the reward of their fellows' enterprise.

Every one advertises.

Any community that has a group of good, live merchants who advertise with well written ads and back them up with the merchandise and modern merchandising methods is going to grow and prosper and business will continue to get better and better.

Judicious, liberal advertising is the surest insurance against slow business and town retrogression.—Renton, Washington, News-Record.

By D. E. O'KEEFE

WHEN one recalls the crime wave that is overspreading many eastern cities with its baneful effect upon life and property, it is refreshing to note how free from crime is the great cosmopolitan city of San Francisco with its vast foreign element and rough characters from every land. The gangster and racketeer gives the metropolis of the west a wide berth, knowing well the reputation for efficiency of the police department and the punishment that will be meted out to the offender. The lawbreaker shies clear of the police department for he knows the consequences, if caught. The great efficiency of the department is the work of the late chief, Dan O'Brien, who made a national reputation for wonderful achievement in ridding San Francisco of the gangster and racketeer. This efficiency is inhanced by his successor, William Quinn, a young man of brains and ability, experience and courage. Firm in his convictions, a foe to the wrong doer, he is the right man in the right place in handling lawbreakers and enforcing the law. With such a man as Quinn at the head of the San Francisco police force, the people of that happy city may rest contented and feel secure from disturbance of the unworthy. With Quinn at the helm the property owner is happy in the thought that his possessions are safe and secure. His dreams will not be disturbed by restless worry of the thief and nocturnal prowler.

While on this subject, it may well be said that crime in this county is handled efficiently by Sheriff J. J. McGrath, who works in conjunction with Quinn in running down criminals. Both are young men with commendable ambitions to serve and give the best that is in them to the people who have called them to high places of trust.

The real drama of the world takes place in the inner life. To be strong in the spirit is to be the leader and conqueror, the hero in every walk of life.—Hanford Henderson.

Weariness does not come so much from great activity as from lack of adjustment to life, to our work, to our surroundings—Mary Dean Parsons.

Alien Children Boost Cost of State's Schools

By LAWRENCE MONFORT

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 21—Presenting a new "white man's burden," the little brown-skinned alien today is pictured by educational authorties as absorbing ten percent of school costs and looming larger as a social and financial problem every day.

More than 100,000 Mexican children enumerated in the department of education's latest registration of minors, have taken the place in public concern which the Japanese occupied a decade ago, and no halting of the picture bride rush is at hand to check their swelling numbers.

The dark-skinned, brown-eyed youngster from below the Rio Grande, imported with his parents for the gypsy-like swing of nomadic labor up and down California outnumbers three to one the children of California's Negroes, Chinese, Japanese, Indians and Filipinos and in some counties, notable those of Southern San Joaquin and Southern California constitutes from 12 to 24 percent of the state's juvenile population.

Migratory schools, numbering 31 at the time the survey was made, do not begin to cope with the alien education problem. Fifty-eight elementary schools of the state register from 70 to 100 percent Mexican pupils, while more than 100 have a predominance of youngsters of that blood in their class rooms.

San Mateo county, with a total of 12,652 minors registered in the survey, has 11,958 or 94.52 percent Caucasians as compared to 134 or 1.06 per cent Mexicans, while its Japanese number 397 or 3.14 percent. Listed also are 48 Negro, 94 Chinese and 21 Filipino minors.

Taking on a deeper tinge of brown as it is traversed southward, the state's juvenile population map deepens from practically pure white in northern border states to a perceptible tan in the south.

Marin county, however, leads in the percentage of Caucasian children with 98.34. Los Angeles with 11.13 per cent; San Diego with 11.97 per cent; Tulare with 11.79 percent; Kern with 12 percent; San Bernardino with 21.41 pyercent and Ventura with nearly 24 percent, have the largest raton of Mexican youngsters to offspring of Caucasian parents.

With 1,209,137 children included in the survey, 1,042,672 are listed as white 14,325 as black, 8,123 as yellow, 4705 as red or Indian; 2856 as brown or Filipino; 32,923 as Japanese and 102,405' as Mexican, according to figures announced by Walter E. Morgan, chief of the bureau of statistics.

Amphlett Talks To Kiwanians On Water District

Horace Amphlett, publisher of the San Mateo Times, in an address to the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday noon, at the regular meeting of that club, portrayed in graphic language the present water situation in this county, and spoke of the proposed county water district.

Amphlett drew the attention of the club members to the fact that the entire future development of San Mateo county, both as regards the residential and the industrial growth of the county, is entirely dependent upon the securing by the county of an adequate supply of water at reasonable rates. There is only one adequate supply, he stated, that is the Hetch Hetchy project which has been developed and financed by the City of San Francisco. But even this supply, were it turned over to the use of this county would not greatly improve the situation at present existing without the installation of mains and distributing pipes to bring the water to the various points within the county, where it is needed.

Amphlett stressed the importance of providing for the future by the formation of a district which shall be empowered to go ahead with the steps preliminary to the acceptance of the offer made by City Engineer O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco to furnish water from the Hetch Hetchy lines to a county water district at wholesale rates. Such a system, Amphlett stated, would cost several million dollars, and would take eight or ten years to build, but could be constructed in units, each unit to be placed in service as soon as completed.

The cost of the water, as offered by San Francisco, would be so low, he stated, that even while the users of water in this county were paying interest on the bonded indebtednss necessary for the construction of the distributing system, and paying off the principal, a saving would be effected over the rates now in effect in most of the communities of the county.

The chairman of the meeting was Lee T. Ross. Among the visitors at the club were M. J. Bartell, assistant in the office of City Engineer O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco, City Manager A. E. Rolison of Redwood City, and E. Small of the Portland Cement Company.

Hoover Street Has Been Named

It is quite appropriate that a street in Menlo Park should be called "Hoover," one that lies in the shadows of the president's home. So the council did this by renaming Fremont street, Hoover street. There is still another thoroughfare in town named after the pathfinder. The council honored the vice-president, too, by naming Laurel street, Curtis street. Other changes are as follows: Florence to Crane street; Laurel avenue, to Laurel street; College Way to College avenue; Partridge street to Partridge avenue; Fremont avenue to Fremont street; University Drive,, Yale Road and Ameilta avenue to University Drive; Brattle street to Chestnut street; Hobart avenue to Hobart street; Cotton avenue to Cotton street; San Mateo avenue to San Mateo Drive; Arbor avenue, to Jenkins avenue; and Columbia Road to Arbor Road; Merrill street has been extended to Oak Grove, so that hereafter the street at the depot will be known as Merrill, named after Charles Merrill, the local capitalist who established the original street.

Grammar School Opened Monday

The grammar school opened for the fall term last Monday with a record attendance at the Central school and at the Freemont branch in Stanford Park.

City Council In Adjourned Meeting

At an adjourned meeting of the city council held Tuesday evening, a step in the path of progress was made when the council ordered 22 lights of modern make to be installed in the business portion of town. The lamps are to be placed on the highway from Valparaiso avenue to Live Oak avenue and on Santa Cruz avenue leading to the depot. The lights are styled after the ones now in use in Burlingame. They are the last word in street lighting. The P. G. & E. has been given a five-year contract to furnish the lights.

The budget was acted upon and adopted for the forthcoming year. The taxes will not be any higher than last year. The rate of fifty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of property has been decided upon. The amount sought to be collected is $21,554 to conduct the municipality for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930. The anticipated receipts are as follows:

Street Carnival Tomorrow Night

The carnival on Saturday evening sponsored by the Native Sons and Daughters for the benefit of the homeless children will have numerous attractions to amuse the large crowd that is certain to attend. The street dancing to the music of a celebrated brass band, the lighting effect and the gay throng will make up a scene bewildering to the onlooker. The side shows will be merry and many. While the bevy of pretty damsels dispensing sweets is quite sure to lure the money from the pockets of the unwary. John Shortridge is chairman of the general committee and this in itself is sufficient to guarantee that the big affair will be a success in every way.

Card Party Well Attended

The card party given Wednesday evening by the Native Daughters for the benefit of a local suffer was well attended. The local Exchange Club donated a costly painting and cash amounting to $5 to help swell the fund for the deserving individual.

Granted New Trial

Judge Buck yesterday granted the motion for a new trial by Hall C. Ross, representing the defendant in the case of J. Milburn against Mrs. Nellie M. O'Keefe, who was sued for damages growing out of an automobile accident which occurred last spring. The judgment rendered in the case by a jury a short time ago was entirely out of proportion and reason and did not in any way justify the evidence submitted at the trial. The setting aside of the verdict by Judge Buck was just and fair.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Arends returned last week from an extended vacation spent in Placer County, Nevada and Oregon.

Water Survey Of California Makes Progress

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 21—(CNB)—Leaping ahead under the impetus of the presidential announcement, plans for a far-reaching federal and state water survey in California today were nearing completion

The Hoover-Young water commission, which will delve into the engineering and economic aspects of the co-ordinated water program will, in all probability, be on the job within the next two weeks, according to Bert B. Meek, state director of public works.

And co-incident with this survey, the personnel of a new legislative water investigating committee will be made known shortly by Lieutenant Governor H. L. Carnahan and Speaker Edgar C. Levey of the Assembly. It will seek to round out the work of the last four years, while the federal-state commission will have as its major task the determination of whether the national government is justified in defraying part of the cost of the project.

"I feel confident that the federal government can be induced to participate in the costs of a sound coordinated water program in California," Governor Young declared today. "A most thorough-going survey is essential, however, before we can hope for federal action."

The $70,000,000 Kennett dam project on the upper Sacramento river; the $24,000,000 San Joaquin diversion system to take surplus waters to parched lands of the San Joaquin Valley; the $50,000,000 Carquinez Straits salt water barrier; the Santa Ana flood control project and, possibly, federal-state participation in the cost of building the great Boulder Canyon adqeduct to bring Colorado river water into Southern California;—these are units more or less definitely set for inclusion in the investigation.

President Hoover will name three members of the water commission, representing the War Department, Department of Interior and Federal Power Commission, while Governor Young will select from five to seven members.

Volcanoes Keep Oceans Salty

Honolulu.—The 485 known volcanoes of the world, discharging every year more than a hundred million tons of hydrochloric acid, supply the chlorine that keeps the ocean salty. This is the opinion of Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, director of the Hawaiian volcano observatory here.

Even though the amount of hydrochloride acid gas in steam from volcanoes is almost negligible, the ceaseless emission of this steam puts the gas into the air and thence into the rain. With the average rainfall of about 40 inches a year the world over, rain water would only need to contain about one part of chlorine in 5,000,000 to supply the ocean's needs. This chlorine unites with the sodium brought into the sea by the rivers and forms sodium chloride, or common salt.

The volcanoes of the Katmai area in Alaska alone supply about 1 per cent of the 100,000,000 tons of hydrochloric acid gas needed. Even the great Hawaiian volcano Kilauea, the steam of which contains only a trace of the gas, contributed something like 30,000 tons a year, Doctor Jaggar said. And in addition there are many unknown submarine volcanoes, each of which is doing its bit.

Doctor Jaggar also explained the presence of calcium carbonate, which is the same as marble, in sea water.

"This is secreted from the water in the body of globigerina, a tiny organism ceaselessly dying and depositing billions of skeletons that make chalk on the ocean bottom. Locally the ocean floor is built up a foot per annum. Ten thousand years would shoal the ocean, but there have been millions of years, and the ocean is still deep.

"But though globigerina is everywhere in the upper waters, two-thirds of the sea bottom has no chalk. What could account for chalk banks being absent? The chalky bottoms are where the ocean is not so deep. It was found by Dr. J. Stanley Gardiner, professor of zoology at Cambridge university, that where the ocean is more than two and a half miles deep, where the pressure approaches three tons per square inch, sea water can readily dissolve the chalk skeletons. And so, with the circulation of the oceans the lime salts are brought back and secreted over again by the live organisms."

Big Snake Stirs Up Hospital

New York.—This is a snake story to keep one up nights—and sober. It was brought into New York by Allan A. Lonnberg, president of the Grace line.

The Grace line Santa Rita, on which Lonnberg was a passenger from Valparaiso, Chile, put in on July 7 at the port of Guayaquil, Ecuador. Mr Lonnberg went ashore.

Shortly before midnight he heard a tremendous clamor in the town. Police were called out, the militia thronged down the narrow streets, fire engines clanged over the cobbles.

Mr. Lonnberg followed the procession to the edge of town, where the jungle begins and where is located the Civil hospital.

A ten-foot boa constrictor had glided out of the undergrowth and made its entrance into the hospital through a window. Gliding down corridor after corridor, it made its way to the cripples' ward. Night lights were burning. Some one screamed.

Then, all at once, there was panic and shrieks of fright and hysteria. The snake had attacked a male nurse. The cripples, many of them bedfast for months, leaped from their beds and fled on newly vitalized limbs to the windows.

One man who had been paralyzed for more than two years jumped six feet, from his bed to a window and another eight feet to the hospital's patio.

Doctors examining him later, believed him cured. His had been a hysterical paralysis.

The police and militia killed the snake.

Soldier of Fortune Still Hopes for Pay

Nashville, Tenn.—Captain R. H. Polk, flying soldier of fortune, and chief of the Mexican revolutionary forces before the revolution folded up, hasn't given up hope of being recompensed for his services.

"I believe," he insisted in an interview here, "that if Gen. Escobar ever comes out of hiding he will pay me."

Gen. Escobar, commander in chief of the revolutionists, has not been seen since the rebellion collapsed.

But pay or no pay, Capt. Polk declares it's "never again" for him. "I've had enough fighting to last me for a while," he said.

When the revolution ended the Mexican government offered a reward of $10,000 for Capt. Polk "dead or alive." He escaped across the border in the automobile of an American officer.

67,000 Bodies Removed From English Cemetery

Birmingham, Eng.—A gruesome job requiring 12 months night work has just been completed. The remains of 67,000 Birmingham citizens have been dug up from the graves in St. Mary's churchyard and transferred to Witton cemetery. The old cemetery, built in 1774, is giving way to a hospital. The bodies were removed at night.

St. Louis.—The Mahoney Ryan Aircraft corporation here has produced a cabin plane equipped with desk, dictaphone, filing equipment, book shelves, and all the fittings of an office. The cabin is sound-insulated against the roar of the engine.

A system has been perfected whereby the user of the plane may read his business letters into the dictaphone and drop the dictaphone records to the ground by small parachutes, to be mailed.

Three of the planes will be built each month.

NEARBY AND YONDER

By T. T. MAXEY

"The Golden Bridge"

IN 1873 the Pennsylvania railroad built a 13-span, single track bridge across the Susquehanna river at Havre de Grace, Maryland. In 1904 the railroad built a double-track bridge to replace the old one and offered to present the original bridge to the counties, which it connects as a highway bridge since it is on one of the main routes between Philadelphia and Washington.

Strange to say, the counties turned up their noses, so to speak, and declined to accept the gift. The railroad then offered the bridge to a group of citizens of these two counties, who accepted it promptly, had a romantic vision, "put up" $100 each as a working fund and began to operate it as a toll bridge. Auto traffic developed "by leaps and bounds," and the owners made money "hand over fist." From 1910 to 1923 it is said to have netted them more than $1,000,000, having been nicknamed "The Golden Bridge."

In 1923 the state road commission purchased the structure, under legislative authority, for $585,000, and continued the tolls until it was paid for and improvements were added.

The old span was narrow. Two trucks could not pass. To overcome this handicap and double its capacity, the annual traffic having grown to about 275,000 vehicles, an ingenious plan was worked out, whereby another deck was anchored to the superstructure. Now, all north-bound traffic moves via the upper deck, and all south-bound traffic via the lower or original deck and the tolls have been cancelled.

"The World's Greatest Organ"

BUILT in Los Angeles and exhibited at the St. Louis World's fair in 1904, where it was played by the great organists of the world, this mammoth instrument was subsequently dismantled and remained mute in a St. Louis warehouse for several years.

And then one day its myriad parts were loaded into thirteen box cars and it was treated to a ride to Philadelphia, where it was enlarged—by 80 per cent, and installed in a great court "in the center of the largest building in the world devoted to retail merchandizing." Now, every week day, the passing throngs are privileged to enjoy the melody which peals forth from that which is said to be both the largest and finest, if it is not the very latest improved, musical instrument on earth.

This king of instruments has five manuals, 232 stops and a forest of pipes—17,854, to be exact—ranging in length from three-fourths of an inch to upwards of 37 feet, weighs 375,000 pounds, and including its several blowers of more than 100 horse power—capable of supplying approximately 21,000 cubic feet of air per minute, occupies a space of 118,602 cubic feet. The largest pipe is of wood, 32 feet long, weighs 1,735 pounds and, 'tis said, two men can crawl through it side by side on their hands and knees.

The instrument is played from two consoles—one for ordinary playing and the other for mechanical playing. Needless to say, the organ is majestic—its music, superb.

Statuary Hall

STATUARY HALL, so called, is a great semicircular, high-ceilinged room, with a Grecian theater effect, in our National Capitol in Washington. Formerly used by the house of representatives—its walls have echoed the voices of Webster, Clay, Calhoun and other personages famous in congress in their time—it was set aside in 1864 as a national statuary hall, to which each state might contribute a statue of two of its most distinguished citizens.

Maryland is typified by Charles Carroll, a signer of the Declaration of Independence; Massachusetts by Samuel Adams who helped promote the Revolution; New York by George Clinton, its first governor and Pennsylvania by Robert Fulton, the first inventor to practically apply steam power; Virginia by George Washington, in the military costume of the Revolution and Robert E. Lee, who commanded the army of North Virginia during the Civil war, in the uniform of the Confederate service. Sequoia—a Cherokee Indian half-breed—after whom the big trees of California are said to have been named, who developed a written and printed language for his tribe, represents Oklahoma, while that great woman, Frances E. Willard, the founder of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, symbolizes Illinois. Robed in the buckskin of pioneer days, Sam Houston, who was President of the republic of Texas when annexed by the United States, depicts the Lone Star state. Space prohibits mention of all. Suffice to say the entire ensemble is an imposing gathering of images of the nation's outstanding characters of their day and generation.

FORBIDDEN THINGS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It was Jens Baggesen, a great Danish poet of the Eighteenth century, who tells of a friend of his—rich, strong, educated, able to do anything or have anything he desired—who 'was quite miserable and unhappy because his physician had denied him the use of coffee.

"If history is to be believed," Baggesen says, "Adam possessed all the advantages and comforts, all the necessities and luxuries a first man could demand. . . . Among ten thousand pleasures, the fruit of one single tree was forbidden him. Good-by, content and peace! Good-by forever all his bliss."

"As we do not know the nature of the fruit which Adam could not do without, it may as well have been coffee as any other. That it was pleasant to the eyes means no more than that it was forbidden. Every forbidden thing is pleasant to the eyes.

"'Of what use is it all to me?' said Adam looking around him in Eden, at the rising sun, the blushing hills, the light green forest, the glorious waterfall, the laden fruit trees, and, most beautiful of all, the smiling woman—'of what use is it all to me, when I may not taste this—coffee bean?'"

It is the forbidden which tempts us most, which seems most desirable. I have been reading a lot of folk stories and fairy tales lately, and it is the closed door, the locked cabinet, the mysterious chamber which invariably gets somebody into serious trouble. Tell an otherwise sensible and clever boy that he must not do some particular thing on pain of death, and immediately he is hell bent to try it; tell him that he must, and he loathes it.

"Naughty, naughty," Smith says to his young son of tender years, who essays to touch his fingers to the hot stove. "Mustn't touch; burn baby," he warns. But forbidden things are alluring. Curiosity gets him into its grip. He walks about the fascinating mechanism with one eye on father and the other on the stove. Some day he is going to see what the consequences are if his fingers come into contact with the shining metal. He toddles off by himself shortly; there is a baby's shriek from the kitchen and he comes away with burned fingers, the penalty for meddling with forbidden things.

Mason, so far as I recall, had had no desire for liquor before the enactment of the prohibition law. He would have revolted against going into an open saloon, and if of an evening one of his respectable neighbors had offered him a drink from a hip flask he would have been shocked, if not insulted. Why should a man fill himself up with hard liquor, he would have asked

It is different now; the thing is forbidden, and so Mason has his favorite bootlegger. He stocks up with all sorts of inebriating concoctions. One cannot drop into his house for the briefest call without his bringing out glasses and a bottle, and not because he really likes liquor, but just because it is forbidden. He is a child told not to touch the burning stove.

Where Bacteria Can't Exist

Berlin.—In the polar sea lies an island which has been found to be absolutely free of bacteria, according to a writer in the Review, a scientific and technical journal. The article tells of exhaustive tests made on the island, the name of which is Nowaja Semjia, by a representative of the Central Geophysical observatory of Leningrad.

Polar air has long been known to be exceedingly pure, but until the Leningrad institute undertook its expedition to Nowaja Semjia, the extent of its purity had never been exactly measured. Dr. Kasansky, who headed the party, spent an entire winter on the island and in that time was unable to discover a single bacterium. Air, water, soil, dust, and even the flesh of wild animals which had been shot by hunters, were all tested and found to be germ-free, the writer asserts.

As a part of the experiments a certain gelatinous substance, upon which bacteria usually thrive, was left in the open air for several hours and then later heated in a brooding device, but not a single germ cound be found. When gelatine of this sort is left exposed to the air of the ordinary big city it becomes so thickly covered with bacteria colonies within 15 minutes that the bacteria can not be counted. Fresh meat was left in the open for eight months, being subjected to all kinds of weather, and at the end of this period there was not the slightest trace of putrefaction.

Los Angeles, Calif.—Left-handedness is an inheritable characteristic and not merely a chance acquisition, according to Prof. Catherine Beers of the University of Southern California.

Zoology students working with Miss Beers have been studying left-handedness for two years and tracing its occurrence in families of the last three generations. Out of 1,398 individuals the students found that 12.3 per cent were left-handed. When the families of these 12.3 per cent were investigated, left-handedness was found to occur in about 25 per cent of the number.

There is a two-in-five chance that the children of left-handed parents will show this characteristic, the students found. In only about 7 per cent of the cases of left-handedness was the individual the only member of the family to have this characteristic.

World Has One Motor for Every 61 Persons

Washington.—There is one automobile to every sixty-one persons in the world, the automotive division of the Department of Commerce announced in a report on world motorization. The high ratio in the United States, which is one automobile to every 4.87 persons, accounts for this high world average. Excluding the United States the ratio is 247 to 1. If Canada were excluded it would rise to the ratio of 287 to 1. The lowest per capita automobile registration is in Arabia, one state (Asir) having 75,000 persons to each automobile. Other countries which help to bring down the high ratio set by the United States are Afghanistan, with 23,166 persons to each automobile, and Ethiopia with 22,545 persons to each car.

ARTIE

His Adventures in Love, Life and the Pursuit of Happiness

By GEORGE ADE

Artie Tells the Stranger What Is What and Why

AS ARTIE came in he saw a stranger seated near Miller's desk. The stranger was rather well dressed, although his garments were not of the latest cut. He had a good tan color in his face, and for that and some other reasons which he could not have explained to himself, Artie knew that the stranger was merely a visitor to Chicago.

"Oh, Artie," said Miller, "I want you to meet my cousin, Walter Miller. He lives in my old town. Walter, this is Mr. Blanchard, Artie Blanchard."

"He was just speaking about you," said the cousin, with an amiable but rather embarrassed smile.

"Did he gi' me the worst of it?" inquired Artie. "I s'pose he did. He's on to the story of my past life."

"No," said Miller, "I was just telling him that if he wanted to know anything about Chicago you were the man that could tell him.

"Well, that's a good send-off. What are you doin'? Passin' me off as one o' the sights o' the town? I s'pose you told him that every visitor to Chicago ought to see Lincoln park, the stockyards, the skyscrapers and Artie Blanchard, and then buy a box o' candy for the loved ones at home."

"No, but I told him you were just as good as a guide-book."

"Better. I can put him next to things that ain't in the guide-books. Come over here next to the window where there's a draft, Mr. Miller. You might as well take the air freely. That's the only thing in Chicago that you'll get for nothin'."

"I believe you're about right," remarked the cousin, as he moved over to a place near the window. "Coming up the street this morning I wanted a glass of water, and I finally had to go and buy it."

"Is this the first time you've been up against the town?"

"No, I was here a week the time of the circus, but I didn't get into this part of town much."

"Well, what do you think of it as far as you've got? Warm town, eh?"

"Yes, indeed; wonderful. I always feel rather lost when I get in the crowds."

"I s'pose it is that way for a day or two, but you'd soon get used to it."

"I don't believe I would. There are too many people here. I'm afraid I'd never get along in Chicago."

"You want to get over that in a hurry. Of course there's an awful push in the streets here any day, and I s'pose when you first get in you kind o' feel that you're up against a lot o' wise city mugs and that they must be purty fly because they live right here in town. I've had people tell me that's the way they felt at first, but it didn't take 'em long to find out there's just as many pinheads on State street as you'll find anywhere out in the woods."

"Oh, I suppose a man would learn about the city in a little while?"

"Cert. It ain't where a man's born or where he was raised that puts him in any class. It's whether he's got anything under his hat. I seen too many o' these boys kind o' jump in from the country and make a lot o' city boys look like rabbits. But if he comes canterin' into town to be a dead-game sport and set a pace for all the boys, w'y, he don't last. It's a small town, but it's too big for any one boy to come in from the country and scare it. Them sporty boys don't last. They get in with a lot o' cheap skates and chase around at nights and think they're the real thing, and then in a couple o' moons they go back home and leave all their stuff in hock. They think they're fly, but they ain't."

"I know some that have done that very thing."

"Sure you do. I ain't roasting no man 'cause he's from the country. You go along the Drive and see all o' them swell joints where the fat boys with rosy complexions hang out. Well, them boys all come in from the country, but they had sense enough to saw wood and plant a little coin when it begin to come easy. I'm tellin' you, the worst suckers you'll find is some o' these city people that know it all to begin with. You can make book that them boys'll be workin' on bum salaries when they're gray-headed, and what's more, they'll be working for some Reub that come into town wearin' hand-me-downs."

"Well, I suppose folks out in the country do give the city people too much credit for being smart," said the visitor.

"Oh, we've got 'em smart enough, all right, all right, but I'm tellin' you about the cheap ones. You're a stranger here and you see some guy goin' along State street puttin' on a horrible front, tryin' to kill women right and left, and you say, 'Hully gee, I wonder who that case o' swell is, young Marshall Field or one o' the McCormicks?' Well, say, it's a ten to one shot that all that that fellow's got in the world he's got right with him, and at that it ain't no cinch he's wearin' underclothes. You don't know—mebbe that guy can't spell through the first reader. Any old farmer with one o' them bunches on his chin could buy him up and a hundred more like him. Well, he's just the kind of a counterfeit that'd go out in the country and play himself off as the real boy because he lives in the city. Now, don't you fool yourself for a minute, Mr. Miller. Take my tip. We've got just as many suckers up here as you've got down your way."

"I think you're right about that," said Miller, who had been listening.

"You know it. Take them mashers along State street. Can you beat 'em anywhere? Then a little farther south you'll see them stranded boys, goin' around on their uppers and livin' on frosted chocolates. They'd sooner stand around in town and starve to death than get out somewhere and make a stand for the coin. Any one o' them vags thinks he's too good to go out in the country or to some little town and live decent"

"It's tough down that way. I walked up through there this morning," said the visiting Miller.

"You can get any kind of a game you want down there, but you're safe if you don't go huntin' for trouble. Any man that keeps hot-footin' right along and says nothin' to nobody is all right. Of course, when one of these new boys comes in and hunts up a speak-easy and says he's got money to burn, there's always some handy man right there to give him a match. When that kind of a mark comes in they get out the bottle o' knockout drops and get ready to do business. A man like you, Mr. Miller, won't have no trouble here. And for goodness sake, don't think you're up against anything great when you're minglin' with Chicago people. When you come to know the town it's as common as plowed ground. I know a good show I'll take you to tonight."

Odd Structure Built by California Woman

What is probably America's queerest house stands in the Santa Clara valley, California. Spread out like a whole village, it has 144 rooms, no 12 on the same level, connected by miles of rambling passageways and corridors. The house was built by a woman of unlimited wealth who believed, so the story goes, that as long as she kept adding to it, she would not die. So, for 38 years, carpenters were kept busy increasing the size.

Its interior suggests a setting for a mystery thriller. There are entrances walled up behind, closet doors opening upon blank walls, trapdoors and weird steps of only two and half inch tread, and balconies over stairs with no entrance to them, says Popular Science Monthly. Some of the rooms contain elaborate gold plate and silver fixtures and stained glass windows valued at $5,000 apiece.

Fines Returned to Speeders

If you were fined for speeding, knew you were guilty, and were just succeeding in trying to forget it, then received a letter of apology and the amount of the fine from the government, how would you feel? That is what happened to a number of speeders in England recently. Scotland Yard had caught them in a speed trap and fined them. Later officials found that the trap was five yards shorter than it should be. Even allowing for the error the autoists were still guilty of speeding, but the British home office decided to take the sporting attitude, return the fines, and send letters of apology.

Shortridge and Free Strong In Battle

A real battle is being staged before the Finance Committee of the Senate in regard to the tariff on cherries. Senator Shortridge of California, is leading the fight in the committee for the cherry interests and is assisted by Congressman A. M. Free, who testified before the committee and submitted a great amount of data and several briefs on behalf of the cherry interests.

When the bill passed the House it carried a rate of 2c per pound on cherries in their natural state and dried cherries; 5½c per pound on cherries sulphured, or in brine, with pits; and 9½c per pound on cherries, sulphured, or in brine, with pits removed. It also carried a rate of 5½c per pound and 40% ad valorem on maraschino, candied or glace cherries.

After the testimony of Mr. Free, the committee increased the rate on dried cherries from 2c to 6c per pound, and on frozen cherries to 2c per pound, but put in a classification of cherries, sulphured, or in brine, in size more than 900 to the gallon, with pits, 3c per pound; with pits removed, 4c per pound.

Senator Edge of New Jersey lead the fight for this new classification which will mean that the small Italian cherries will continue to come into this country at the low rate. The contention was made that small cherries which are used by eastern manufacturers are not grown in sufficient quantity in the United States. Senator Shortridge and Congressman Free gathered a great deal of material on this subject and have, they believe, demonstrated that we are growing all the cherries of small sizes needed.

Senator Shortridge is asking for a rehearing on this matter before the committee. If the committee does not remove this iniquitous classification, the matter will be carried before the Senate, and, even if that should fail, Congressman Free believes that the House conferees, when the Bill comes back to the House, will insist upon removing this classification and will place a duty of 5½c per pound on cherries, sulphured, or in brine, with pits, and 9½c per pound with cherries, sulphured, or in brine, with pits removed, without regard to the size of the cherries.

The importing interests have some strong advocates on the committee and the attitude of Senator Smoot of Utah, chairman of the committee, has been very disappointing to California agricultural interests. It was thought he would be a real advocate of proper agricultural tariffs, but his attitude has been for a reduction rather than an increase on most of the California items.
